Trump administration replaces Obama-era power plant rule

The ACE rule gives states three years to come up with an emissions-cutting plan.

The Trump administration finalized a new carbon emissions rule for U.S. power plants on Wednesday that it said could cut pollution without damaging the coal industry, replacing a much tougher Obama-era version to fight climate change.

The move was a boost to coal companies facing tough competition from natural gas, solar and wind energy suppliers, but infuriated environmentalists and Democratic lawmakers who said the regulation was too weak to significantly reduce emissions and would put public health at risk.

The so-called Affordable Clean Energy (ACE) rule gives states three years to devise their own plans to cut emissions mainly by encouraging coal-fired power plants to improve their efficiency, the Environmental Protection Agency said.

"Our ACE rule will incentivize new technology which will ensure coal plants will be part of a cleaner future," EPA Administrator Andrew Wheeler said at an event at agency headquarters attended by coal-state lawmakers, White House chief of staff Mick Mulvaney and a dozen coal miners in uniform.

The ACE sets guidelines for states to develop performance standards for power plants to boost the amount of power produced relative to the amount of coal burned. It listed six existing "candidate technologies" plants can use to do so, including duct leakage control and boiler feed pumps.

Obama's Clean Power Plan, by contrast, had aimed to slash power plant carbon emissions by more than a third from 2005 levels by 2030 by pushing utilities to drop coal in favor of cleaner fuels like natural gas, solar and wind.

That regulation was never enacted because of lawsuits by Republican states. It was stayed by the Supreme Court in 2016. Wheeler said the ACE was written "within the four corners of the Clean Air Act" by confining reduction requirements directly on power plants, not allowing a more systemwide approach.

"States will be given the flexibility to design a plan that best suits their citizens' environmental and energy needs," according to a summary of the rule, which estimated a cut in carbon emissions of 35 percent from 2005 levels by 2030.

President Donald Trump had vowed early in his presidency to kill the Clean Power Plan as part of his administration's attempt to revive the ailing coal industry, arguing the regulation exceeded the federal government's authority.

"DIRTY POWER PLAN"

Environmentalists, Democrats and some state attorneys general dubbed the regulation the "Dirty Power Plan," saying it would keep coal plants running for longer and is likely to lead to increases, not cuts, in carbon emissions and other pollutants over the next few decades.

"This is an immoral and an illegal attack on clean air, clean energy and the health of the public, and it shows just how heartless the Trump administration is when it comes to appeasing its polluter allies," said Michael Brune, head of the U.S. environmental group Sierra Club.

U.S. Democratic Sen. Tom Carper said the EPA plan was based on "a warped reinterpretation of the Clean Air Act that allows states to decide whether or not to regulate one of the largest sources of carbon emissions in our country."

"At a time when Americans are urging us to take meaningful climate action and reduce our carbon footprint, today's Dirty Power Plan is a failure of vision and leadership," he said.

Joe Goffman, executive director of the Environmental & Energy Law Program at Harvard, said the new regulation could allow some coal-fired power plants to avoid retirement by making "hardware fixes and operational changes."

But a Reuters survey last October of 44 utilities that have announced plans to shutter coal units in coming years showed none of them expected the new EPA proposal would affect the timing of those retirements — casting doubt on whether it will provide much help to the coal industry.

Domestic coal demand has been sliding in recent years as utilities retire aging coal-fired units and switch to cheaper supplies of natural gas, along with cleaner energy sources like solar and wind.

Asked after the rule rollout how many coal plants at risk of shuttering may get a lifeline with the implementation of ACE, Wheeler told reporters the agency did not analyze this but that states would have more "flexibility" to determine what plants stay open. REUTERS

Train carrying ammo in Nevada derails, closes road

2 A Union Pacific freight train derailed in Nevada on Wednesday, spilling vegetable oil and prompting the closure of an interstate highway. The vegetable oil spilled out of one of the 22 derailed cars after the train went off the tracks shortly before 11 a.m. local time, the Elko County Sheriff's Office said on Facebook, citing Union Pacific Railroad officials. "We had some vegetable oil and some diesel spill. There was nothing hazardous that was released or in the derailed cars," Union Pacific spokeswoman Kristen South said. South said ammunition was being carried on the train but was not in the cars that derailed. She said there were no injuries in the derailment and that the cause was under investigation. The derailment prompted authorities to shut down Interstate 80 in both directions, the Nevada Department of Transportation said on Twitter. REUTERS

Lawsuit claims NFL, Underwood lifted 'SNF' theme

3 Country music superstar Carrie Underwood, the National Football League and NBC were sued on Wednesday for allegedly copying the "Game On" theme song used in 2018 for "Sunday Night Football" from an identically-titled song recorded two years earlier. Heidi Merrill, who said she uploaded her "Game On" to Google's YouTube in March 2017, said her copyright was infringed after Underwood's producer Mark Bright rejected her August 2017 pitch at a conference in Nashville to use the song for "Sunday Night Football." In their complaint, Merrill and her co-writers said Underwood's "Game On" is "substantially — even strikingly — similar, if not identical" to their song, including in title, tempo, meter, time signature, rhythmic and melodic contours and patterns, note and chord progressions, and hooks.

Saudi crown prince linked to Khashoggi murder

4 Saudi Crown Prince Mohammed bin Salman and other senior officials should be investigated over the murder of journalist Jamal Khashoggi given credible evidence against them, a U.N. rights investigator said on Wednesday. Khashoggi's death stirred widespread disgust and hurt the image of the prince, previously admired in the West for pushing to end the kingdom's oil dependence and easing social restrictions including by allowing women to drive. After a six-month investigation, the 100-page report by the U.N. special rapporteur on extrajudicial executions, Agnes Callamard, accused Saudi Arabia of a "deliberate, premeditated execution." "There is sufficient credible evidence regarding the responsibility of the crown prince demanding further investigation," Callamard said. REUTERS

Nxivm leader Keith Raniere, facing charges including racketeering, sex trafficking and child pornography. REUTERS

Sex-cult guru Raniere guilty of all counts

The Nxivm leader could face life in prison.

Keith Raniere, a New York man accused of running a cult-like group in which women were kept on starvation diets, branded with his initials and ordered to have sex with him, was found guilty of all charges against him by a New York jury on Wednesday.

Raniere, 58, was charged with crimes including racketeering conspiracy, sex trafficking and possession of child pornography. He faces a possible sentence of life in prison.

The verdict in federal court in Brooklyn followed a trial that lasted more than six weeks. Raniere's sentencing is set for Sept. 25.

Raniere is the founder of Nxivm, a purported self-improvement organization based in upstate New York. Prosecutors said that he created a secret sorority within Nxivm called DOS in which female "slaves" turned over compromising materials that were used to blackmail them.

DOS was sold to recruits as an all-female organization, when in fact it was controlled by Raniere, according to former members who testified at the trial.

Outside of the courtroom, after the verdict was read, a group of former Nxivm members gave the prosecution team a round of applause.

Catherine Oxenberg, the mother of a former cult member, called her daughter in front of reporters to tell her the verdict. "I'm so happy," the mother was heard saying.

Raniere was the "grandmaster" of an inner circle of slaves, who in turn recruited slaves of their own. Some of those recruits were coerced into having sex with Raniere, and some were branded with his initials, according to former members.

DOS slaves were forced to hand over nude photos and embarrassing confessions and told that the material would be released if they disobeyed orders or tried to leave, according to a former member and other witnesses.

Prosecutors also said that, years before creating DOS, Raniere began a sexual relationship with a 15-year-old girl. The child pornography charges stem from explicit pictures he took of the girl, who went on to become one of his inner circle of DOS slaves.

Raniere's lawyer, Marc Agnifilo, had told jurors in his closing arguments on Monday that no women were ever forced to do anything against their will.

Other members of Nxivm, which is pronounced "nexium," were charged alongside Raniere, and have all pleaded guilty. They include Nxivm president Nancy Salzman; her daughter, Lauren Salzman, who testified as the prosecution's star witness; actress Allison Mack; and Seagram liquor heiress Claire Bronfman.

The group first became known for its "Executive Success Program" courses, which purported to give students the ability to achieve their life goals by overcoming mental blocks. Witnesses testified that leaders of the organization psychologically manipulated and abused its members and demanded total obedience. REUTERS

Amtrak power outages wreak havoc on Northeast Corridor

Power problems snarled Amtrak and NJ Transit train service throughout Wednesday.

MORGAN ROUSSEAU

New York Penn Station trains abruptly stopped running Wednesday, reportedly because of overhead power-wire issues.

Trains at Penn Station were asked to come to a "safe stop" on the tracks because of a "power hold," Jason Abrams, an Amtrak spokesman, told The New York Times. No further details were immediately available.

The power outage disrupted Amtrak trains as well as NJ Transit trains in and out of Penn Station, and caused three trains to become stuck in the tunnel, CBS reported. Power was reportedly restored, but the incident caused residual travel disruptions. NJ Transit said riders should expect 60-minute delays.

NJ Transit rider Bob Bianchi tweeted a video from inside an NJ Transit train, saying the power was out and that it was "getting hot."

NJ Transit said Northeast Corridor, North Jersey Coast Line and Midtown Direct rail service was suspended in both directions due to the Amtrak overhead wire problems. Midtown Direct service was diverted to Hoboken.

"PATH will cross-honor NJ Transit rail tickets/passes at Hoboken, Newark Penn station and 33rd St. NJ Transit bus and private carriers will cross-honor NJ Transit rail tickets and passes," NJ Transit said on Twitter.

Frustrated Amtrak passenger Taylor Bouwmeester was one of several riders seeking answers. "@Amtrak currently sitting on a train stopped dead in its tracks from NY Penn to Philly for over 30 w/ minimal updates. Are we just stuck in the forest or what? I have places to be ... was supposed to have arrived by now!" she tweeted.

Power issues brought Amtrak to a grinding halt on Wednesday.

Why Aren't Doctors Telling Knee Arthritis Sufferers About These Two Often Successful Treatments?

Two Advanced Medical Treatments Every Knee Arthritis Sufferer Needs To Know - Before Or After Knee Replacement Surgery

NYC -If you suffer with knee arthritis pain, you have probably already tried many treatments... especially countless pain medications. With minimal or no results

Are there any better options?

Thankfully, advancements in science and technology come extremely fast. And now there are two very good options for knee arthritis a lot of knee arthritis sufferers have never heard of.

Before we get into the two treatments, please understand this...

NYC Pain MD is a REAL medical clinic that has treated thousands of knee arthritis sufferers. Patients travel from all over the tri-state to be treated at one of their clinics because they want the best medical treatments available.

What you are about to discover are two REAL medical treatments. Not miracle cures you see on infomercials or on the internet.

Know this fact: There is no cure for arthritis. But there are these two treatments that have already helped thousands of knee arthritis sufferers - possibly just like you.

#1 Viscosupplementation

Here's what you need to know about viscosupplementation - the good and the bad....

When you have arthritis, you suffer a decrease in the lubrication fluids in your knee. In other words, your knee joints basically "dries up."

The lubricating fluid that decreases is called "synovial fluid."

Pharmaceutical companies (with the help of scientists) can now make synovial fluid-like compounds that... during viscosupplementation treatments... doctors precisely inject directly into the knee joint.

This helps replace the lubricating fluid to the knee joint - allowing it to move more freely and smoothly and often decreasing or even eliminating the pain.

What Results Can Be Expected?

Like all medical treatments, the results vary and can not be predicted. But many knee arthritis sufferers get dramatic results. It is not uncommon for patients to either postpone knee replacement surgery for years... or even permanently cancel it.

But There Is A BIG Problem

The key is the treatment must be EXTREMELY PRECISE. If the procedure is slightly off, the formula will not get into the knee joint and the treatment will not work.

That's why the experts at NYC Pain MD use advanced digital imaging so they visually guide the injection accurately into the knee joint during the treatment.

Research shows that performing joint injections without imaging miss the joint as much as 30% of the time.

If you have had prior viscosupplementation without this special digital imaging without good results - this may be the exact reason why.

That's why NYC Pain MD even takes it one step further. They do not just use one form of advanced imaging during treatment - they use two in their "double confirmation" process. This is to ensure patients get the best possible results.

Another Important Factor

Viscosupplementation "medicines" also come in several different formulas.

Just like all medications, some people respond better to one than another. While many doctors only use one formula, the experts at NYC Pain MD use several and great effort is taken to figure out what the best one is for you.

What Should You Do If Viscosupplementation Fails?

#2 Radiofrequency Neurotomy

This treatment is called, "Radiofrequency Neurotomy." RF for short RF is a procedure that is based on the theory that blocking the nerve supply to the painful area may alleviate pain and restore function.

Several branches of nerves that surround the knee are known as "Genicular nerves."

Radiofrequency waves are delivered to the Genicular nerves under advanced imaging to "block" the nerves.

Two procedures are performed. First, a test, diagnostic "G Block" procedure is done to determine if the procedure is going to decrease pain and improve function.

If this first "test" procedure is successful, Genicular Neurotomy (GRF) is performed for long term relief.

Is It Safe?

Research has shown this procedure to be safe and effective.

One study published November 4, 2010 in the journal Pain found that RF treated subjects on average "achieved at least 50% knee pain relief at 1, 4 and 12 weeks, respectively. No patient reported a post-procedure adverse event during the follow-up period. RF neurotomy of

Advanced Imaging Allows Doctors To Pin-Point Treatments And Relieve Knee Arthritis Pain

Science rescues knee arthritis sufferers? Research shows joint injections done without advanced imaging misses the joint about 30% of the time. Now doctors can put lubricating fluid directly into the arthritis joint that may alleviate pain and restore function to many.

Genicular nerves leads to significant pain reduction and functional improvement in a subset of elderly chronic knee OA pain, and thus may be an effective treatment in such cases."

Who Should Try This Treatment?

RF should be considered after other treatments, such as anti-inflammatory pain medication, physical rehab or viscosupplementation do not offer good enough results.

RF may be utilized before resorting to total knee replacement. RF allows many patients to avoid knee replacement surgery.

But - RF has also been found effective AFTER knee replacement surgery when the patient still feels pain.

The pain after a failed knee replacement surgery can be debilitating and this procedure may be the only thing that helps and give you after surgery relief.

What To Do Next If You Are In Pain

NYC Pain MD offers a limited number of complimentary knee arthritis screenings every month. These screenings are a way for knee arthritis sufferers to get their questions answered and see if they are a candidate for one of the cutting-edge treatments offered at NYC Pain MD. If you would like to schedule a screening, just call 877-380-8537.

The screenings fill up fast every month. This screening is no cost and there absolutely no obligation.

More good news: for qualified candidates, insurances and Medicare often cover these treatments.

State nears passage of aggressive law to fight climate change

The plan is to eliminate greenhouse gas emissions by 2050.

mate change is the issue of our lifetime."

Cuomo was expected to sign the measure if it passes.

Democratic-led U.S. states and cities have been developing environmental policies that advance action on climate change after President Donald Trump vowed to pull the United States out of a 2015 global accord to fight climate change and has backed continuing planet-warming extraction and use of fossil fuels.

"I want New York to have the most aggressive climate change program in the United States of America."

Gov. Andrew Cuomo

The New York measure, which the Assembly in the state capital Albany was expected to approve Wednesday after the Senate passed it on Tuesday, mandates reducing emissions by 85 percent from 1990 levels by 2050, and offsetting the remaining 15 percent, making the state carbon neutral.

"I want New York to have the most aggressive climate change program in the United States of America," Gov. Andrew Cuomo told public radio WCNY in Syracuse after he reached an agreement with legislators on the bill's language. "Cli-

On Wednesday, the Trump administration finalized a new carbon emissions rule for U.S. power plants, mainly coal-fired facilities, that replaced a much tougher Obama-era version to fight climate change.

New York's "Climate and Community Protection Act" calls for reducing emissions by 40 percent by 2030 and using only carbon-free sources such as solar and wind to generate electricity by 2040.

Achieving the ambitious goal could require New York state to take drastic steps including eliminating gasoline-powered automobiles and oil-burning furnaces, as well as restoring wetlands or planting trees to remove carbon dioxide from the atmosphere.

Business advocates denounced the plan as a job killer that would force industries to move toward using wind, solar, hydropower and other alternative energy sources and would ultimately fail.

"A zero emissions mandate is unrealistic," The Business Council of New York State said in a statement.

A study published in March by the New York-based think tank Demos said that the act would create and sustain about 150,000 jobs, a little over half of which would be held by people without a college degree.

"Jobs created in renewable energy and energy efficiency can't be outsourced, it's always local," said Daniela Lapidous, organizer for NY Renew, a coalition of over 100 environmental groups. REUTERS

NYC leads US in freelance workers, according to report

Fiverr reports there are over half a million freelancers in the NYC metro area.

BECCA GLASSER-BAKER
Rebecca.Glasser@metro.us

Fiverr just revealed the 25 largest markets in the United States for skilled freelancers, and New York City tops the list.

Next up are Los Angeles and Chicago. According to Brent Messenger, Fiverr's VP of Public Policy and Community, "New Yorkers are known for their hustle, so it's no surprise that the Freelance Economic Impact Report identified the New York metro area as the epicenter of skilled freelancing. From startups in DUMBO that need a business plan to corporations on Wall Street that need data analysts, businesses in New York have come to rely on skilled freelancers to get the job done."

The Freelance Economic Impact Report issued by Fiverr estimates there are about half a million skilled freelance workers in the New York City metro area. It was determined that overall, skilled freelance workers in NYC earned an estimated $25 billion in the 2018 tax year.

The NYC metro area also hosts the largest population of professional and technical freelancers, whereas L.A. is the leader in creative freelancers.

According to the study, skilled freelancers are people who perform "knowledge-based labor, which requires specialized skill sets and experience."

The study focuses on individuals who earned their income from non-traditional employment, did not employ others and were in creative services (video, artists, etc.), technical services (computer science, architecture, etc.) or professional services (legal, marketing, etc.).

Fiverr reported that average revenue for workers in the top 25 areas was $39,200 versus $36,400 in other areas of the United States.

According to Messenger, the Freelance Economic Impact Report shows that "businesses across the country are becoming increasingly reliant on skilled freelancers. This should give people the confidence to take the plunge because whether it's an extra source of income or a full-time career, the data shows that there's money to be made."

Former Trump aide Hicks frustrates Dems with limited testimony

Hope Hicks, once a close aide to President Donald Trump, drew fire from Democrats on Wednesday for not answering questions during a closed House Judiciary Committee session about whether her former boss broke the law.

White House lawyers asserted immunity for Hicks on matters involving her 14 months in the Trump administration, continuing the strategy of not cooperating with investigations by the Democratic-led House of Representatives.

Lawmakers wanted to ask the 30-year-old publicist about six instances in which Democrats believe Trump may have broken the law during the 2016 presidential campaign and while in the White House. But Hicks' responses were so limited that she would not even tell them where her White House office was, Democratic lawmakers told reporters.

Hicks also was directed not to answer questions about material she already told Special Counsel Robert Mueller during his investigation of Russian election interference and possible obstruction by Trump, the lawmakers said.

U.S. Rep.
Ted Lieu

ing to what they're saying in terms of objections, so she doesn't answer," U.S. Rep. Ted Lieu said.

Lieu said Hicks did answer questions about the campaign but did not elaborate.

Democratic lawmakers said White House lawyers did not claim executive privilege but argued that Hicks was immune from having to testify, which they called a "bogus" position that does not exist in law.

"They make the objection, we say it's nonsense. But Hope Hicks is listening to what they're saying in terms of objections, so she doesn't answer."

"No prior president has engaged in such a transparent effort to block his own former aides from testifying about the president's misconduct," Judiciary Chairman Jerrold Nadler said in a letter to the White House counsel.

Hicks was Trump's campaign press secretary and White House communications director until she left in March 2018 and later became chief communications officer and executive president for Fox Corporation, parent company of Fox News.

A source familiar with the situation says Hicks remains close to Trump and a strong supporter but does not speak with him as much as she did when she worked at the White House, when her office was right outside the Oval Office. When Trump was in Los Angeles recently, she visited with him.

Democrats who emerged from the session said they may go to court to force Hicks to respond.

"We have to establish the record of her refusal to answer the questions so that she can be compelled to do it. So this is what we're doing today," Representative David Cicilline said.

"It's not at all helpful. It's more obstruction by the White House," said U.S. Rep. Veronica Escobar, a Judiciary Democrat who said it was time to impeach Trump.

Republicans said nothing new came out of the questioning. "It appears to be Democrats trying to relitigate the Mueller report," U.S. Rep. Matt Gaetz. REUTERS

Biden under fire from rivals for remarks about 'civility' with segregationists

Sen. Cory Booker called for an apology from the presidential front-runner.

Former Vice President Joe Biden came under sharp criticism from some of his Democratic presidential rivals on Wednesday for remarks he made this week about his time working civilly with segregationists serving in the Senate in the 1970s.

U.S. Sen. Cory Booker, who is also seeking the Democratic nomination, called on Biden to apologize.

"Frankly, I'm disappointed that he hasn't issued an immediate apology for the pain his words are dredging up for many Americans. He should," Booker, who is black, said in a statement.

In a crowded primary campaign that so far had been civil, Wednesday's criticism exposed bubbling racial and generational tensions within the Democratic field that is the most diverse in history.

Biden's campaign did not immediately respond to a request for comment on the criticism.

Biden, 76, is leading in early polls to take on President Donald Trump in 2020.

At issue are Biden's remarks at a New York City fundraiser for his presidential campaign on Tuesday night.

Biden said that U.S. leaders have lost the ability to work together. He pointed to two segregationists from the South who were serving in the Senate when Biden was elected — Democratic Sens. James Eastland of Mississippi and Herman Talmadge of Georgia.

Eastland described black people as inferior and fought against efforts to desegregate the South. When Biden joined the U.S. Senate in 1973, he and Eastland, members of the same political party, served on the same committee.

"At least there was some civility. We got things done. We didn't agree on much of anything. We got things done. We got it finished," Biden said, according to a pool report distributed by his campaign. "But today, you look at the other side and you're the enemy. Not the opposition, the enemy. We don't talk to each other anymore."

New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio, who is also seeking the Democratic nomination, criticized Biden's remarks.

"It's past time for apologies or evolution from @JoeBiden," de Blasio wrote on Twitter. "He repeatedly demonstrates that he is out of step with the values of the modern Democratic Party."

De Blasio called out Biden for invoking Eastland, posting a photo of himself on Twitter with his wife, who is black, and his two multiracial children.

"Frankly, I'm disappointed that he hasn't issued an immediate apology for the pain his words are dredging up for many Americans. He should."

U.S. Sen. Cory Booker

"It's 2019 & @JoeBiden is longing for the good old days of 'civility' typified by James Eastland. Eastland thought my multiracial family should be illegal & that whites were entitled to 'the pursuit of dead n'ggers,'" de Blasio wrote on Twitter.

Booker also criticized Biden for his use of the word "boy" — a term that was frequently used by racists to demean black men. REUTERS

Why do people think it's okay to cut in line? There is a line there for a reason, and everyone's time is just as precious as yours. Even if someone who is in front of you in line isn't in a rush, it is still so selfish and self-involved to cut in front of them. The world doesn't work that way. Brian Tyree Henry on the too-close- for-comfort satire of 'Child's Play'

The modern reboot of the "Chucky" franchise hits theaters this Friday. PAT KING

How dependent are we on our technology? Furthermore, as we become reliant on our phones and devices to perform what were once everyday tasks, what would happen if something were to go awry in the programming? These questions are posed in the new reboot of the classic horror franchise "Child's Play," starring Aubrey Plaza, Brian Tyree Henry and Mark Hamil as the voice of Chucky.

The film takes place in the present day. Single mother Karen Barclay, played by Plaza, works at a big-box store to make ends meet and provide for her son Andy, played by Gabriel Bateman. While working, she processes a return on a brand-new "Buddi" doll (with a wireless-router symbol as the dot in the "i") and decides to bring it home to Andy for his birthday. Little does she know, this particular doll's AI engineering has been altered by a disgruntled worker at the Kaslan Corporation manufacturing plant, and set to be able to carry out dangerous and negative acts in response to its surroundings. As Andy shows his new friend Chucky his rough neighborhood and voices his disdain for his Mom's jerk of a boyfriend, Shane, Chucky gets some new ideas on how to keep Andy his best friend forever.

This evolved new version of Chucky, voiced with equal parts menace and heart by Hamil, is a bit more modern than in the original film, with total access to its owner's cloud and home entertainment and security systems to, you know, gain their trust and friendship. All of this is set up in the opening scene of the film via an infomercial from the Kaslan Corporation unveiling the new doll. This intro is a shocking bit of foreshadowing for the viewer, and even took the film's star, Brian Tyree Henry, by surprise upon reading the script.

"When they gave us the script, it wasn't called 'Child's Play' at the beginning," says Henry, who stars as Detective Mike Norris whose mother lives on the same hall as the Barclays in the film. "It was called the 'Kaslan Project,'" remembers the Emmy- and Tony-nominated actor. "And so, I'm reading the story not really knowing exactly what it's about and I'm going through it and I see the name Chucky and I'm like, no way. There's no way they're doing this, right? Are they really gonna do it?"

Oh, and they really did it. The film, directed by Norwegian director Lars Klevberg and written by Tyler Burton Smith, brings both the camp and scares in equal measure, making work on nurturing a loving environment to set an example. After all, Chucky wasn't programmed to be evil from the start. It is the hostile environment at home that throws him off the deep end.

"That's why I kind of like the horror genre so much," says Henry, with a laugh. "Because in the horror genre, they literally are commentaries on us as a people, in our society. Horror movies literally reflect kind of where we are as human beings on this Earth, sometimes. And turn that mirror back on ourselves like, 'Oh s—t, man, maybe we're actually kind of awful and we need to make some kind of change?' But at the same time, the thing I love the most about our 'Child's Play' is that it's really fun at the end of the day. It brings us together, in a way." "Child's Play" hits theaters Friday, June 21.

"In the horror genre, [the movies] literally are commentaries on us as a people, in our society. Horror movies literally reflect kind of where we are as human beings on this Earth, sometimes."

for one of the most purely fun fright fests to hit the theaters this summer. But while the film veers into slasher territory, it definitely sends home a message that in order to create and maintain relationships, you need to

'Stranger Things': Fashion

The cast of the Netflix series has participated in high-end fashion campaigns and editorials. Now some brands are releasing capsule collections inspired by the series.

LUZ LANCHEROS

letters@metro.us

When "Stranger Things" premiered in 2016, it caused world madness: not only because of its scientific conspiracy/child with mental powers/gang of children that saves the world + monsters plot but because it appealed enormously to that '80s nostalgia. This, of course, included its costumes and hairstyles, especially Steve's. The phenomenon grew so much that even Vogue and other fashion magazines made garment guides based on the characters from the series. But as "Stranger Things" continued to gain more and more popularity, major brands began to sign its cast starting with Millie Bobby Brown to appear on red carpets and editorials.

Her castmates soon followed, and brands have not been slow to create their own lines inspired by the show, especially with season three approaching. These are the hits that have made major fashion brands keep tuned to the series.

season 3 of "Stranger Things" will be released. This time the series is set in 1985.

MILLIE BOBBY BROWN: FROM ELEVEN TO FASHION ICON

With 19 million followers on Instagram she stood out immediately attending awards ceremonies dressed by top designers like Calvin Klein. She now sits in the first row at fashion shows debuting at Coach Spring Summer 2017. At 15, Brown has participated in other projects, such as the remake of "Godzilla" polishing her style, which has been criticized in the past for being overly sexualized or making her appear older than she is. Dressed by Michael Kors, Jenny Packham, Armani and Kate Spade, as well as Oscar de la Renta for red carpets, Brown has done editorials for Interview, W Magazine, Vogue and for brands such as Moncler.

HER GANG IS QUICK TO FOLLOW

Finn Wolfhart, Millie's love interest in the series, has also had his appearances as the "cool kid." He had a very popular participation with the rest of the gang in "Lipsync Battle," but it was Mike Wheeler who signed with St. Laurent for its autumn/winter campaign, in a very Bob Dylanish style, honoring the aesthetics of Anthony Vaccarello. For his part, "bad boy" Bill Hargrove (played by Dacre Montgomery) shows all his attributes in a very '80s H&M capsule collection.

We have seen her in Prada, Dior and Miu Miu in an ultra-feminine Audrey Hepburnish style, but reinvented soberly and with subtle changes in hairstyles and accessories. Sadie, meanwhile, was the image of Miu Miu's "Whispers" campaign and also starred in a Pull & Bear campaign, in a very retro and Californian look accompanied by Finn Wolfhart.

Cruise tips with Carnival Cruise Line Chief Fun Officer Shaquille O'Neal

The NBA legend is bringing his Big Chicken fast-casual restaurants to select cruises in spring 2020.

patrick.king@metro.us

Any fan of NBA Hall-Of-Famer Shaquille O'Neal knows that the man knows how to have a good time.

After retiring with one of the most celebrated careers in professional basketball, Shaq has presented himself as an advocate for things fun, whether it's DJing around the world, starring in commercials or busting on his co-host and playful rival, Charles Barkley, on TNT's "NBA Halftime Show."

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

These days, Shaq is bringing his joyful attitude to life as Carnival Cruise Line's Chief Fun Officer.

So with such an important and prominent role on the ship, what does Shaq as his main responsibility?

"I've been CFO for two years now, and it's my job to ensure that people have fun on the ship," explains O'Neal, who sat down with me before Carnival's "Cruise Into Summer" media event. "I used to live on the beach across from a port, and I thought the ship was for old people, until I finally got on one. So I went to [them] and said, 'You should hire me to tell people that you should choose Carnival and choose fun.'"

"What [they] have always done is an unbelievable job of keeping prices affordable for people. It's just my job to let people know that there is so much stuff to do on the ship. It's not just go to your room, go out look on the water and go back into your room. There are restaurants, libraries, sport courts, putt-putt golf course, movie theater, comedy shows. It's like the best Vegas hotel on the water."

While he is getting the word out about how fun these cruises are, Shaq's wildly popular Las Vegas-based fast-casual fried-chicken sandwich restaurant, Big Chicken, will be partnering with two of Carnival's newest ships, the Radiance and the Mardi Gras, for the spring 2020 season. Both restaurants will include hit sandwiches such as the Shaq Attack, the Shaq Daddy and the M.D.E. Shaq's Big Chicken will join the ranks of an impressive food lineup, including Emeril Lagasse's Bistro 1936 on the Mardi Gras.

"[It's] one of the top restaurants in Vegas," says Shaq of Big Chicken. "I should know, because I have four of the top five in Vegas, which is great. Great chicken sandwiches ... it's just great eating."

While many people who plan vacations stress out about cramming in as much as possible into their trips, the CFO's idea of a perfect cruise is one where you come with an open mind and go with the flow. And with the variety of activities onboard, that won't be hard.

"It depends on what you want to do," says Shaq. "If you want to make the day about eating? Every restaurant. If you want to make the day about having fun? Movies, sports court, pool. There's just so much you can do. You want to get away from everybody?"

night with the wife? Fine dining. I've been on the ship a couple of times. I've only taken the three-day cruises. I know how to not be seen on the cruise. I'll go and rest during the day and come out at night. By the time I wake up again, it's time to get off."

Recently announced Carnival Cruise Line Cruise Director Matt Mitcham agrees with the big boss who he says, embodies the entire ethos of Carnival.

"I would say come with an open mind," says Mitcham. "We've got loads of new things for you guys. Even if you've sailed before, come like it's your first time. There's so many new events and venues that we have. It's going to be superexciting. Come to have fun. That's why we choose fun."

Now that the basketball season is over, O'Neal's co-host on TNT's "NBA Halftime Show," Charles Barkley, might need to find to find a position on the ship. But where would the Chief Fun Officer place a willing and able Barkley?

"He'd be downstairs in the toiletry department," says O'Neal, "because he's full of sh-t and he knows how to clean the sh-t."

Parks on Tap with a serious workout. Hit the trails in East and West Fairmount Park when Parks on Tap visits locations like Lemon Hill and Fairmount Water Works. Go on a guided run to explore the hidden and lesser-known trails near these popular park destinations. The runs will be anywhere from four to six miles, and though the group will be led with a 10-minute-mile pace, runners are encouraged to go at their own pace and enjoy the park. Parks on Tap is the finish line, so you can reward yourself for your hard work with beer and snacks.

SPORTS

Late Garland interest creates last-second doubt for Barrett, Knicks

New York raised some eyebrows with a late workout of the Vanderbilt point guard.

joseph.pantorno@metro.us

Should the teams possessing the top three picks of the 2019 NBA Draft tomorrow night remain the same, their selections are a foregone conclusion.

At least, that's what we thought.

The New Orleans Pelicans will take Duke superstar Zion Williamson first and the Memphis Grizzlies will select point guard Ja Morant out of Murray State.

Then there are the Knicks, who provided one final twist on Wednesday to serve a reminder that the struggling franchise could make another shocking selection that defies logic.

Williamson's Duke teammate, RJ Barrett, has been the pick for the Knicks since they were awarded the No. 3 selection at the NBA Draft Lottery last month.

The hype surrounding Williamson has not been seen since the arrival of LeBron James in 2003. Morant's stock has skyrocketed since March. Yet Barrett is considered by many as the most NBA-ready prospect.

At 6 feet 7 inches, he is a premier wing talent who has shown flashes of becoming a dominant two-way player in the pros.

When he's on, the Canada native can score from anywhere on the floor. His length makes him unstoppable in transition thanks to long strides toward the basket, along with a 6-foot-10 wingspan that makes him hard to cover around the rim.

That length also holds the promise of becoming an elite defender who can provide shut-down coverage from the paint to beyond the arc. However, he has been hesitant at times to fully commit to that side of the ball.

His mid- to long-range shooting has been streaky and his shot selection has been suspect, but given proper time and space he can knock down almost anything. That space isn't always afforded at the NBA level, which is priority No. 1 when it comes to his development.

Even when sharing the floor with a star like Williamson, Barrett was still able to put up big numbers in his lone season at Duke. In 38 games he averaged 22.6 points, 7.6 rebounds, and 4.3 assists per game.

He'll need to be greedy at times if he wants to become the centerpiece of what is shaping up to be a young Knicks team (barring free agency). He's exuded a desire to be the man in New York, previously stating he's "built" for the pressure that comes with playing in the Big Apple.

Barrett doesn't necessarily see himself going anywhere else, either, as the Knicks were the only team that he worked out with.

The Knicks, though, raised some eyebrows on Wednesday when they worked out Vanderbilt's Darius Garland, as first reported by Jonathan Givony of DraftExpress.com.

A 6-foot-2 point guard, Garland was suddenly under "serious consideration" by the Knicks, as a legitimate franchise point guard has alluded them for decades.

Garland averaged 16.2 points and just 2.6 assists per game at Vanderbilt, which are not the most promising stats for a point guard.

What has been noticed is his blinding speed, agility and superior ball-handling skills. Not to mention a lethal 3-point shot that has seen him become a top five prospect while providing a shroud of mystery as to what he can do against elite talent.

The Knicks have had their fair share of projects and unknowns over the past few years, whether it's been with Kristaps Porzingis, Frank Ntilikina or even Kevin Knox.

While Barrett seems to be the safe pick, the last-minute workout of Garland suggests that the Knicks see something greater in Garland.

Or, they could simply be drumming up some last-minute action. The teams directly behind them — whether that be the Chicago Bulls, Boston Celtics or Minnesota Timberwolves — could be willing to offer up something big to move up to the No. 3 spot.

Could Chris Kreider be a fit for Isles?

The Rangers forward is on the trading block.

joseph.pantorno@metro.us

The New York Islanders and Rangers don't pull off trades too often.

Since the Islanders entered the NHL in 1972, the two teams have paired up for just three transactions.

Two of those came in 1972 before their rivalry ever began. The Rangers sent Ron Stewart to Long Island for cash after they delivered two 1973 draft picks to ensure the Islanders wouldn't pick certain players during that year's expansion draft.

The third came in 2010 when the Islanders sent Jyri Nieminen to the Rangers for a sixth-round draft pick.

Preparing for the 2019 NHL Draft, the Islanders and Rangers might want to dust off the relationship and give it another go.

The rebuilding Rangers are on the verge of catapulting well ahead of schedule this week.

After trading for Winnipeg Jets star defenseman Jacob Trouba to bolster the defense, the Blueshirts will draft either Jack Hughes or Kaapo Kakko with the No. 2 pick of the draft on Friday night.

With the Rangers' talent pool improving and expanding, there could be two big-money signings on the verge of taking place.

Since Trouba is a restricted free agent, the Rangers will have to offer him a contract between $7.5 million and $8 million to ensure he stays at Madison Square Garden.

That will cut away nearly half of their remaining $16 million in cap space, which would take them out of the running for star free-agent winger Artemi Panarin. The former Blackhawk and Blue Jacket will likely get a deal in the neighborhood of $11 million and the Rangers are considered one of the favorites alongside the Florida Panthers.

To stay in the Panarin hunt, the Rangers would have to shed some salary and a key man to help do so could be veteran winger Chris Kreider.

The 28-year-old has been listed as a trade candidate in multiple reports over the past month. He has one year left on his contract, providing a $4.6 million cap hit next season.

Kreider has had some of his most productive seasons as of late, recording 28 goals in two of the last three years. In the four seasons in which he's played in at least 70 games beginning in 2014, he's put up at least 20 goals every time.

As he enters the tail end of his prime, however, he doesn't necessarily fit the Rangers' plans of getting younger. Shedding that contract will also be a huge step to free enough space to make a serious run at Panarin, who is also a left winger.

The Islanders could be a good match for Kreider considering they are a few pieces away from becoming serious Stanley Cup contenders.

Kreider would provide the Islanders with the scoring depth they so desperately need while providing sizable upgrades at left wing over the likes of Tom Kuhnhackl and Leo Komarov behind Anders Lee.

The Islanders could slot Kreider in as a second-line left winger to flank Brock Nelson and either Josh Bailey or Jordan Eberle.

Granted, that could change if the Islanders go out and pull off some big moves that could yield the likes of Matt Duchene in free agency or Mike Hoffman on the trade market.

With Kreider's contract expiring after next season, the price should not be too high. Considering the Rangers are getting the much-needed cap relief, the Islanders could offer one of their two second-round draft picks this year to help get the ball rolling.

Would the New York teams be willing to hook up for a trade that would help one another? History suggests no. But it should be something both teams consider on draft night this Friday.

US goes for top spot vs. Sweden

The Americans close out group play today against their toughest opponent yet.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

Now is when the 2019 FIFA Women's World Cup really starts for the United States Women's National team.

After cakewalks against Thailand (13-0) and Chile (3-0), the top-ranked Americans face a familiar foe in Sweden this afternoon for the top spot in Group F to wrap up group play.

The Swedes are ranked ninth in the world, a drastic improvement in competition for the US after facing No. 34 Thailand and No. 39 Chile. Sweden has had few problems with those same Group F combatants, beating Chile 2-0 before a 5-1 takedown

USWNT Jill Ellis will look to exact revenge against Sweden today. GETTY IMAGES of Thailand.

With six points each, the United States is only ahead on goal difference, which means they must draw or beat Sweden to win the group. However, that could mean a harder path in the knockout stage as they would meet the hosts France in the quarterfinals.

That doesn't mean much, at least to defender Crystal Dunn.

"We want to freaking play France," Dunn told ESPN. "Fingers crossed obviously. But at the end of the day, it's like, mind-boggling that people would think we would actually want to lose a game going into the knockout rounds. We want to continue those winning vibes."

But Sweden will provide a stiff test for the Americans first, even if revenge is on the menu.

A year after winning the World Cup, the US was ousted by Sweden in the quarterfinals of the 2016 Summer Olympics as the underdogs revealed a game plan on how to beat the high-powered Americans.

Sweden sat back and played a defensive match against the US, pouncing on the counter-attack to pull off a 1-1 draw before winning on penalty kicks.

"That was the initial moment for me where I was like, 'Huh, this is different,'" Ellis said. "I remember talking to my staff coming out of the Olympics and [saying], 'We've got to make sure we are prepared for this piece of the evolution.'"

Ellis has stacked her team with attacking prowess, using a 4-3-3 lineup that shows off just how offensively powerful the US is.

The only problem is choosing who to play against the defensive-minded Swedes.

The United States has six capable forwards in Alex Morgan, Carli Lloyd, Megan Rapinoe, Mallory Pugh, Tobin Heath, and Christen Press that wreak havoc on opposing defenses.

Morgan scored five against Thailand while flanked by Rapinoe and Heath while Lloyd put up two against Chile alongside Press and Pugh.

Also, keep an eye on what Ellis decides to do at the back. She's played Julie Ertz as both a center back and holding midfielder at the World Cup while the stalwart veteran in Becky Sauerbrunn saw the bench against Thailand.
